FOR OLD FASHIONED FLOWERS

Copyrighted January, 1916, by Beatriz Michelena.

No. 12. ONE OF THE questions frequently put to me is about the kind of facial lines and features most likely to succeed in the film world. These queries come from inexperienced girls with very nebulous aspirations to some day develop into "movie stars." Were I able to answer them with any degree of decisiveness, I should immediately become a very valuable source of information for producers with long years of experience in the profession.

A matter technically known as "photographic values" is one of the knottiest problems that motion pictures have to solve. This applies alike to the piece of furniture employed as a property and the face of the actor or actress who makes use of it.

The common adage that "the camera will not lie" is a misleading one. More often than not a thing will photograph out of its natural color and light. A very hideous green as an actual coat may give a panelling a richest hue in its photograph translation. That is why the properties of the regular theater will never do for the motion picture stage unless they are retouched with the painter's brush.

In a measure this same uncertainty applies to the performer's features and complexion. No producer can be absolutely sure of how well one will photograph until a test is made. It seems that certain lines of the face and shades in one's complexion, which are scarcely noticeable in actual life, will inaccountably make strongest appeal to the lens of the camera and throw everything else into subordination.

At times this works to the performer's advantage. At others, however, the camera seems intent on searching out all that is hard and disagreeable in a face. In this respect it often appears to almost get underneath the skin and open secreted traits to the light.

There are certain general considerations in respect to one's features, however, that can be pretty well relied upon to make either for or against good photographic results. I shall discuss some of these in future "talks," but have first gone to this length to have it thoroughly understood that there can be nothing hard or fast about what I am going to say.

My observations will apply as tendencies rather than definite fact, and shall always be open to exceptions.

Deliberate Ugliness

"(CURL PAPERS AND A KILN) are likely responsible for more unhappy marriages than either you or I dream of. A great many highly intelligent American women have the Japanese idea about beauty—after marriage the Japanese women blacken their teeth—to make themselves ugly in the sight of other men, quite forgetting how unattractive they make themselves to their own husbands.

Many of our own women, allowing the cares of housework to weigh down on them, arise of a morning, wash themselves indifferently, tie their hair in a hideous knot, and get into a sloppy dress. In this garb they greet their families at breakfast—the most trying meal of the day. With this image of sullenly ugliness in their minds, husband and children leave the house, carrying away a repulsive impression of a woman that ought to be all love and charm to them.

Now, you can make neat, stylish house-dresses for half a dollar. You can buy them for a dollar and over. They are designed so they can be slipped into in a hurry.

You should wake up five minutes earlier if you are rushed in the morning. This gives you time to do your hair properly, and for a sponge off. When you greet your family then, you do it looking attractive, fresh, inspiring. You feel prettier, too—and since it is you who determine whether your home is cheerful or no—it will be you who start off the family on a day of good work and good thoughts—all because of a dainty breakfast table and a smiling mother and wife.

not think that you have to make the best of an imperfect complexion. Turkish baths would be good for you, and help clear the skin.

I have been following your directions for hair culture, and find that my hair

Some women think it a duty to look as unattractive as possible while performing household tasks

This is not a market basket, but a durable, shallow straw au naturel has been fitted out with a purple leather lining on which are stitched loops that hold excellent steel implements. There are a good trowel, a short handled fork for spading ground, a pruning knife, a tape line, two pairs of scissors, one long bladed for roses and the other built to cut tougher stems. The basket is deep enough to hold any posy you like and clip on your garden jaunts, and is altogether just the thing for spring.

These are annuals that will bloom in six weeks after sowing the seeds, will last till winter, and do well in dry places: Sunflower, petunia, nasturtium, marigold, portulaca, convolvulus, dwarf calliopis, phlox, drummondii and nicotiana. Rapid spreading hardy perennials are sweet rocket, golden glow, bocconia, monarda, heliopsis, hellanthus, arabis alpina, scabiosa caucasica and the wickurallana rose, which is fine for creeping over rock work.

The Scotch pink is a hardy dianthus which, when treated as an annual in like manner as the sweet william, gives very satisfactory results. The delicately fringed, variously colored, fragrant flowers give the plant an odd yet attractive appearance.

The evening primroses are free blooming annuals, with widely opened flowers of satiny texture and delicate colors. They are suited for solid beds, borders, for pots and to grow in shrubby borders in shaded places where few other flowers will flourish. The seeds should be planted to stand about a foot apart in rather thin or sandy soil. These plants are also successfully treated as biennials by sowing the seed in July and transplanting the young plants to a cold frame, to be placed in the open the following May. The blooming season is from early spring until winter, and the average height of the plant is one and one-half feet.

The cornflower is also known as "bluebottle," "ragged sailor," "kaiser blumen" and sometimes as "bachelor's button." The plants are of a hardy nature and are among the most attractive and graceful of all the old fashioned flowers. When placed in water after cutting the flowers increase in size. Seed should be sown in the open in May, and the young plants thinned to four or six inches apart. They thrive well on all moderately rich garden soils.

CHINESE GIRLS HOLD SOCIAL AT Y. W. C. A.

Young Chinese girls, members of the Girls' Guardian Society, met at the Y. W. C. A. on Saturday evening where games were played and athletic contests held. The girls of the club are all under 16, but have taken a deep interest in association affairs, and the contests between the Reds and Whites was a big feature of the evening. Miss Ruth Yap was captain of the Reds, the winners, while Miss Elsie Wong captained the Whites. Miss Lillian Jaies and Miss Anne Brewer, visiting secretaries, were present.

A SYMPATHETIC WOMAN

Who has herself found relief from suffering is usually willing to offer helpful suggestions to her friends and neighbors who suffer likewise. That is the reason why Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has today such an immense sale. It is brought because all over this country well women are telling other women how this wonderful medicine made them well.—Adv.
